Advance Millinery Shows

an Era of High Crowns

Coming crowns cast their talismans before. It is the crown which foretells the millinery trend. If it is high, mannish and "different" from that which we have been accustomed to see in the little crowd, then be assured it is a French model. Just arrived. Its brim is quite sure to be narrow, and its crown is of a graceful, elegant shape, counteracting any undue severity of line.

CHIROPRACTIC

AND RESULTS

QUESTION—"What material evidence have you to offer that you can cure diseases in all kinds of conditions?"

ANSWER—"The success of any health system rests on the results that system accomplishes. The Science of Chiropractic, a drugless system, has only its results in restoring the sick to health to account for its phenomenal growth. Today it is a tried and proven Science, established with more than 20,000 practitioners, and secure, in its future with millions of followers—patients suffering with every conceivable kind of disease. RESULTS count. Results represent the very best of material evidence of the worth of anything. Chiropractic is founded upon the idea that health is a matter of the proper adjustment of the human spine; that disease is the result of nerve impairment cutting off the free transmission of functional energy supplied by the brain to the organs involved. Chiropractic is known by its RESULTS. The competent Chiropractor is known by his patients. All of which is 'material evidence'. To get this evidence—

LOADING OF COTTON

GREATED EXPEDITED

BALES HANDLED DIRECT FROM COMPRESS TO SHIPS HOLD BY IMPROVED PROCESS.

(Savannah News)

For the first time in the history of the port of Savannah since the days of the old sailing vessel and hydraulic cotton press, work will be begun today on the loading of the Norwegian vessel Almora with cotton direct from the Mutual Compress and Warehouse Company.

The forces of the compress at the foot of Randolph street are working night and day under the personal supervision of President Murray M. Stewart, Jr., in an effort to complete the cargo of the vessel by Thursday night. A force of about seventy men is at work on the compress, and about that many more will be placed on the stowage by Strachan Shipping Company, agents for the vessel, this morning.

The compress of the Mutual Company is handling about 1,000 bales per 8-hour day and will have 2,000 bales ready to begin loading at 7 o'clock this morning. The process of loading direct from compress to ship means a great saving of time and expense to the shippers.

The Almora will take a cargo to Murmansk for the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, Messrs. Wells, Toky and Knight, the representatives of the Russian concern who are in Savannah superintending the shipments of cotton are of the opinion that the method of handling cotton direct from the compress is a distinct advantage. It is practically certain that the plan will be used to a much greater extent in the future.</

SWEET POTATO GROWERS FORM AN ORGANIZATION

Valdosta, Ga., July 17.—The Georgia Sweet Potato Growers organized here last Friday by electing Mr. J. C. Ulmer of Lowndes county, president. Mr. W. T. Willis, Jr., of Grady county, was elected vice president. Mr. A. K. Simmons, of the same county, was elected general manager of the association, and will have charge of the business affairs, as such.

In addition to electing officers, a charter was granted under the Georgia Co-operative Marketing Act, by laws governing the association were adopted, and other matters of importance attended to.

The newly elected board of directors, comprising some of the best business men of South Georgia, were duly installed. They are: Elmer Singletary, Thomas county; B. F. Walker, Brooks county; W. P. Sloan, Colquitt county; T. A. Maxwell, Mitchell county; W. T. Willis, Jr., Grady county; J. C. Ulmer, Lowndes county; Fred Purvis, Berrien county; W. C. Gause, Lanier county; J. O. Waters, Pierce county, and Dr. C. Miller, Bulloch county.

The matter of electing a secretary-treasurer, was left open until later, this job being split. The secretary's work was given to the general manager's office, and the president will act as treasurer.

The manner and method of selling their output was not taken up at this time. It is said that they have several offers from responsible organizations, and it is very likely that an arrangement will be made with one of these to take over the sales and distribution of their sweet potatoes.

One of the splendid features of the meeting was the speech of Mr. John F. Deegan, New York, general sales manager of the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers, Inc. Mr. Deegan is an authority on marketing and his remarks at this time were timely and contained much valuable and encouraging information for the growers present.

The association already has a membership of some 700 or more, in Grady, Thomas, Mitchell, Colquitt, Brooks, Wilcox, Tift, Cook, Berrien, Ware, Pierce, Camden and Bulloch counties. Intensive membership drives will be put on in all those where the work hasn't been finished, as well as some others, and it is now predicted that a membership anywhere from 2000 to 3000 will be secured before the membership campaign closes late in the fall.

PLANT LADINO CLOVER FOR STOCK GRAZING

Stock raisers of Georgia have long felt the need of an easily perennial spring pasture to supplement their Bermuda pastures. Among the numerous legumes at Georgia Experiment Station, Ladino clover appears most promising. This clover is a variety of the common White or Dutch clover, which is the principal pasture clover of the north and middle west. Ladino clover comes from the sub-Alpine valleys of Italy, where it is grown only on the heavy lands and is irrigated. Under such conditions it is cut four or five times and said to outyield alfalfa.

Ladino clover seems to be best adapted to the Piedmont and Mountain regions of the State. It should not be planted in very poor soil, but rather on the better grades of heavy clay land.

Under Georgia conditions, Ladino clover starts to grow vigorously with the first warm days of spring and growth continues until the hot dry summer weather begins. During the dry summer weather, the plants make very little growth, but as soon as the fall rains begin growth is renewed, and the plant grows vigorously until cold weather begins. During winter the growth will vary according to the temperatures. During mild winter considerable growth may be made. Even during the severe winter of 1923-24, Ladino clover made a growth of 4 or 5 inches after it was frozen to the ground by the unusual cold spell in January. From the above it will be seen that this clover does best during cool moist weather. Under weather conditions similar to those at the Georgia Experiment Station, excellent pasture may be obtained during March, April and the early part of May. Some years the pasture will remain good even as late as July. Sometimes in October, depending on the season, pasturing may be begun again and continued during November or up to cold weather. During mild winters some winter pasture can be obtained.

In selecting land for a Ladino clover pasture, a good grade of heavy clay soil, or a piece of well drained bottom land should be chosen which is free of weeds. The land should be plowed and disked an early in the fall as possible so as to give the ground time to settle. Ladino clover needs a fine, firm seed bed. Three to four hundred pounds of acid phosphate applied at this time will usually pay for most of our Piedmont soils. The clover should be seeded as soon as cool weather begins and when there is an abundant supply of moisture in the ground. This is usually in the first half of October in the Piedmont section. Seeding should be at the rate of about 5 pounds of seed per acre. The seed may be drilled in or broadcast. In either case the seed should be covered very lightly, not more than one-eighth to three-fourths of an inch as they are small. When broadcasting, care should be taken to distribute the seed evenly. Unless the land has grown either Crimson, Alsike, Red, White or Hop clover within the last two or three years the land must be inoculated with the proper kind of bacteria. This can be done by broadcasting the surface soil from fields growing the above clovers at the rate of 400 or 500 pounds per acre, just before seeding, or artificial culture for White clover may be used. Such cultures may be obtained from most seedmen or the Department of Agriculture, Atlanta, Georgia.

The first spring it is best not to pasture the land or to pasture very lightly. Ladino clover spreads fairly rapidly by means of creeping stems, and soon forms a thick mat over the ground which is quite effective in keeping down weeds. We have as yet no information as to how long a stand of this clover will last. There is every reason to think that it will last for a number of years.

The carrying capacity of Ladino clover will of course vary with the soil and the season. In an acre field this spring it was estimated that there was about one ton of hay. Ladino clover is very nutritious and palatable, has about the same food value as alfalfa. Like some other clovers it will cause bloating when eaten too freely, especially when wet. Bloating can be prevented by not turning cattle into the pasture when it is wet with rain or when the cattle are very hungry. Straw or hay should also be available to the animals as they are said to turn instinctively to them when bloated threatens. Probably the best use can be made of a Ladino clover pasture by pasturing it only part of the day.

There are several possible uses of this plant which we have not been fully investigated. As Ladino clover makes most of its growth during the time Bermuda grass is dormant, it

STEPHENS' ROOM

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THIS was a note from Stephens to the morning mail asking me to come to his room for a few minutes. He was ill, and he wanted to see me. I was not intimately acquainted with Stephens. He had worked in my office for a year or so, I had known that he lived in a rather remote place, but I had not seen him. I had not seen him for a long time, but I had given him a letter from home, but I had given him no word of my return. He had never seen me particularly remarkable, and I was specially interested.

I got a new idea of him when I entered his room. He was seated by a window, looking out at the hills, and he rose as I came in.

"I'm ashamed to have taken so much of your time," he said, "but I've always wanted you to see my room."

It was a cheap little room in the basement house; it was heated by a soft coal stove, and lighted by a kerosene lamp; it was in every way old-fashioned and unmodern, but it had distinction and it told me more in a moment of Stephens' tastes and character than I had previously learned during all the months that I had known him.

Everywhere there was order and everywhere from the books on the table and the cheap prints on the walls to the worn carpet on the floor—it was one his mother had made as a girl Stephens told me—and the braided rug on the floor, there was refinement and simple good taste. I had not thought before that a room could reveal so much of a man.

He paid but four dollars a month for this room and he had no money to waste on decorations, but he had put himself into it, he had gloried in it, he had surrounded himself with the most beautiful things he had or could afford and these things gave him pleasure, they added to his self-respect, and they gave pleasure and satisfaction to all who came to visit him.

As I sat looking around at the simple, cheap, but satisfying appointments of Stephens' room, my mind reverted instinctively to Mrs. Clayton. She is an impressive, slow woman who dresses elegantly and almost tastefully, and who lives in a pretentious house. When one talks to her she reveals the external signs of education and cultivation. She has traveled, she talks easily, she goes with the best people in town. It is only when one enters her house that one sees how vulgar and commonplace her tastes are. Everywhere the fact is revealed in one's ear from the ornate rugs to the heavy furniture, the pictures on the wall; from the expensive glazing on the floor to the clutter of bizarre bric-a-brac huddled together on the table and mantel-piece. Everything in the little room in which Stephens lived cost more than one-half as much as the things in the house of Mrs. Clayton, but he had no money, but he had taste.

Perhaps we should hesitate, many of us, to enter the room of a man whose tastes are determined by a look into our closets or our bureau drawers, or a visit to the houses or the rooms in which we live, but all of these things like Stephens' room tell a vivid gripping tale of our ideals, our tastes, and our character.

It may be possible to combine the two. In well drained bottom lands a combination of Ladino clover, Leopold, Dallas, Bermuda and carpet grass would seem ideal. Three separate pastures of Ladino clover, Bermuda grass and Kudu would give good pasture throughout most of the year. Very lately this clover has been obtained only from Italy at a very high price. Recently the United States Department of Agriculture has been able to develop a seed region in Idaho. Seed are still rather high, costing from $1.00 to $2.00 per pound according to the grade, but will undoubtedly become cheaper in a few years. In most parts of the United States, Ladino clover does not produce seed. Plots at this Experiment Station, however, have seeded fairly well. It is not likely that seed will be produced commercially in Georgia, but there is a possibility that our farmers may be able to produce seed for their own use.

At the present time we do not recommend planting Ladino clover on a large scale. While it looks very promising, we think it best to wait until it has been tried out over a longer period of time before recommending it for extensive planting. For those farmers in the Piedmont and mountain regions of Georgia who would like to try out a small pasture of this clover, the Georgia Experiment Station has obtained a small quantity of seed which can supply at cost.

BUSINESS IS GOOD FOR THE MERE ASKING

MERCHANTS WHO COMPLAIN
AT HARD TIMES ARE NOT HELPING CONDITIONS.

At the request of the Times Mr. T. K. Kelly, nationally recognized authority on advertising and selling, prepared the following articles as a suggestion to the business men of Statesboro and other neighboring towns on how to stimulate business. The Times believes Mr. Kelly's suggestions to be of great value and urges their careful consideration by every business man in this section:

I wonder if we recall the resolutions we made in January, 1924? It seems this last year, more than ever, that promises with some people are like pie crusts—easily broken.

But every organization in January, 1924, firmly resolved to make this year better than 1923, and one of the chief reasons why many firms have failed to keep these promises they made to themselves is because they have sold themselves on the idea that it cannot be done.

Business these next few months is going to be no better than during the past few months if we do not use better business methods, if we do not eliminate the idea that there is no money in our district, and that people are not in a buying mood.

Step into your bank today and find out their daily clearances. Stop into the postoffice or press company and find out how much mail is being sent out of town. You'll find that there is just as much business tapping at your door today as there ever was. But are you doing as much to get business as you should be in keeping with business conditions today?

There are thousands and thousands of men and women employed today, from coast to coast, by firms selling direct to the consumer. They are taking the trade right from under the eyes of the retail merchants in their immediate vicinity, and taking it from where the retail merchants expect their biggest business. Still, retailers in some districts do not wake up—they have a fair day Monday, Tuesday is dull, Wednesday about the same, Thursday no better, Friday some trade, and Saturday they are busy.

What is to prevent a store employing say four clerks from sending two or three clerks out to visit families in their immediate district, putting in full working hours, doing this Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday?

The retailer in having his clerks call upon the people at their homes will have a better chance of securing unknown sources who are calling at these homes selling merchandise.

People in a merchant's district don't know what kind of firms these unknown sources represent—they don't know whether they are reputable or not, but they do know the local merchant, his store, and his stock. They know they can depend on the right kind of merchandise at his store, because he is part of the community, he is a citizen in the district the same as they are, and certainly he would not defraud them by selling inferior merchandise at hold-up prices the same as many of these fly-by-night concerns are doing.

There is not a wholesale house or manufacturer in existence who will not give you special for leaders that will enable you to combat the prices and values that the bell-ringers are offering to the retail trade.

Some merchants will say, "My clerks will not do that—they have too much pride." Clerks of that caliber must eliminate their pride if they're going to retain their positions—in fact, no man should have any pride until he is a millionaire, and when he's a millionaire he doesn't need to have any pride, because a millionaire is regarded just as highly as he is when he wears a dress suit.

Every clerk employed should be thoroughly sold on his job—he should have faith in his employer, in the stock, the store, the values given to such an extent that he would be glad and willing to go out and tell his neighbors about it.

I suggested this plan to a merchant one day a short time ago, and his reply was, "It's a good plan all right, but it won't work in my territory." That's one of the chief obstacles that a lot of retailers place before themselves. They get the idea that their trade is different, their town is different, and from the way they talk, you might think they were doing business on a remote island thousands of miles from civilization.

As a matter of fact, if you look at the situation right square in the face, it simmers down to the point that the trade in Podunk is about the same as the trade in New York City. People everywhere are about the same, they think the same thing.

The visiting merchant went on his way and made up of city folks, or of farmers, it doesn't make any difference. Good merchandise at attractive prices will be a business getter—particularly when that merchandise is demonstrated there right in their own homes, where there will be nothing much to distract their attention. The farming population is made up of kindly, genial men and women, who will be glad to have a visit from a merchant or a merchant's representative introducing his merchandise.

There is hardly a merchant in business today who has not got an automobile, and he certainly can afford to spend some time each week out in the country with two of his clerks, supplying merchandise to the people of his newest states and latest numbers, but he should get a top-notch leader, selected probably from some idea into business that will make dull business a thing of the past. The time is past and never will return when we can work only half time.

I would tell salespeople in the store, who might object to such work that it was up to them to make business a paying proposition for me or they would have to expect less remuneration. I would give them to understand that they would get paid for their services, and no more, and that naturally the worth of their services to me depended upon what those services produced.

Besides helping to combat the menace of the bell-ringer, selling more merchandise immediately, and affording effective means of selling moving times, this plan of canvassing gives a merchant a good method of getting closer to his customers. Few of us realize how many customers we lose through being too distant, and through not being in close touch with them.

Retain the friendship of old customers by all means, and good old-fashioned word of mouth is a splendid way of accomplishing this. A well trained efficient salesman or saleswoman can be an invaluable missionary in behalf of your store out among the trade.

If the trade is slow in coming to your store, bring your store to the trade. If merchants will follow out this plan and back it up with some good, hard hitting advertising they will have no need to complain about poor business. Business in any line is slow of accomplishing this. A retail store, a bank, or a brokerage business.

But, to the merchant who is befogged with the idea that business is so bad that no effort can make it better will have to get rid of this idea as his first move for better business.

There's nothing in the present business situation that warrants such an attitude. Yet, for some reason or other, a great many business men expect that the United States should enter into another period resembling war prosperity. Regardless of that sort of reasoning, or rather lack of reasoning, there has been nothing at any time to indicate that business will ever roll up hill again.

Many business men appear to have an idea that they should get rich over night—that's an idea that will persist, handed down to us from the gun powder era. We may as well make up our mind that the world is not going to pay us a bonus, even though we all think we're entitled to it.

As to this business situation, we must admit that business does not come as easily now as it did in 1919 and 1920, but what of it? The worst that is required to make your business show a profit is a goodly share of common sense, combined with the thrill that comes in knowing that your business is progressing, and knowing that you're making a success of it.

And in considering such plans for increasing your business by this method of canvassing out through the trade, or any other idea that has the elements of practical business sense, do not be too easily discouraged. Remember, that a great deal you hear about business is mere propaganda before themselves. They get the idea that their trade is different, their town is different, and from the way they talk, you might think they were doing business on a remote island thousands of miles from civilization.

To Shave Voters to Prevent Repeaters

San Juan, Porto Rico.—Unusual precautions are to be taken to prevent repeating in the coming presidential elections in San Juan. Safety razors, indelible ink and possibly nitrate of silver are discussed in mark voters and prevent repeating.

In previous elections each voter was required to stick his finger in a pot of indelible ink. This year not only will each voter be required to be marked but an election official will shave him. The question of where the voter will be shaved is still under discussion, some advocating shaving the back of the hand while others favor shaving a patch of hair from the back of the right ear.

Sleeveless Knicker Suit Is Ideal for Sportswoman

We were not all in favor of knicker suits some few years ago. However, that is ancient history, today the knicker suit is the ideal garb of the sportswoman. Every detail is planned for comfort with the style element accented. For midsummer the sleeveless kinds are liked best of all. Of course in this age when accessory counts so much in costume one exercises a discriminating taste in matter of blouse, the hat, and other details. The strictly tailored and mannish effects are preferred. The picture illustrates the point. The knitted four-hand tie is considered very smart. The narrow patent leather belt is the finishing touch. Indian Trinkets Worth $24.00

THE STORY OFTEN HAS BEEN RECOUNTED OF THE FABULOUS INCREASE IN VALUES THAT HAVE COME SINCE PETER MINUET ON MAY 6, 1626, PURCHASED MANHATTAN ISLAND FROM THE INDIANS FOR TRINKETS VALUED AT $24.00. IF THE SAME AMOUNT OF MONEY HAD BEEN SET ASIDE AT THE TIME AND HAD BEEN KEPT INTACT WITH ITS ACCUMULATIONS OF INTEREST COMPOUNDED AT SIX PER CENT SEMI-ANNUALLY IT WOULD NOW BE APPROXIMATELY ONE BILLION DOLLARS.

CHARLES G. EDWARDS OFFERS FOR CONGRESS

MAKES PUBLIC PLATFORM UPON WHICH HE STANDS; PROMISES TO GET TOGETHER AND PLAN FOR BIGGER CROP.

VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN FOR HIGHWAY BONDS

ADVOCATES DECLARE THAT AN ISSUE OF $70,000,000 WILL NOT INCREASE TAXES.
Atlanta, Ga., July 22.—New kinds of campaigns, aside from political campaigns, are being waged by the people in many sections of the country in the sixty-ninth congress. Some localities set greater store by certain things than by others. For instance, here in Georgia good roads is one of the paramount issues. Comparing to the Legislature, now in session, will be the proposed bond issue for the construction of a system of important highways graded and paved according to the most improved style. It is recommended by many civic, industrial and highway organizations that the Georgia highway department, which is working with might and main to improve the roads in Georgia, unanimously recommends the big bond issue.

It is claimed that it will take $70,000,000, plus all the federal aid that can be obtained, to complete the system of already planned, and partially built state highways. This is a 6,000-mile, county seat to county seat system; is within 5 miles of 85 per cent of all the people in Georgia, and has often been referred to as a complete "farm-to-market" system.

If any bonds are issued, advocates of the bond issue claim, enough should be issued to give every county its full share of the system, and not concentrate more, with others less, than their share. It is asserted that it costs no more in taxes, and it is pointed out that the benefits are frequently put. "Why not complete the job at one time?" is a question that is frequently put. Extra taxes will not be required to pay the bonds, it is argued. The 3-cent tax now being paid by every purchaser of a gallon of gasoline is the only money involved, it is pointed out. It will, proponents claim, take care of sinking funds, interest, and provide a surplus that should be used to retire the bonds and save interest charges, or go to the construction of auxiliary roads that would not otherwise be paved, it is stated. For another quarter of a century, advocates of a bond issue show that there will not be any property tax, nor any income tax, nor one cent of additional tax paid over what is being paid right now.

The Legion members have previously devoted one day to this work and will give one other day of their time in order that any veteran or dependent who may not know how to fill out his application will not suffer on that account. Friday, August 1st, will be the last chance for these men to do the work for you. We will be at the court house all day, and I want to advise you to come early so you will have no trouble in being waited on. We want to help you, but we don't want you to wait until late afternoon to get here. Everyone is requested to bring his discharge with him so we can get much of the information required in the application from that source. Please tell EVERY EX-SERVICE MAN you know about the meeting. The date is AUGUST 1st. Don't let any man fail to hear about this meeting. The Bulloch Times has advertised these meetings for us with, and making any charges and we hope this people will help us also by communicating with any ex-serviceman who may not be a subscriber to the Times.

TOBACCO GROWER IS GREATLY ENCOURAGED

J. E. BRANNEN WANTS FARMERS TO GET TOGETHER AND PLAN FOR BIGGER CROP.
Tobacco growing has been proved profitable in Bulloch county, and some three years ago there was a considerable acreage grown in the county.

Last year there was some agitation looking toward an organized effort to increase the acreage, but the effort came to naught. So far as we are informed, there was only one planter in the county, J. E. Brannen, at Stillson.

From time to time encouraging reports have been had from Mr. Brannen's crop, and it has attracted considerable interest among those who have seen it growing. Now that the season is drawing to an end, and the total results are capable of being analyzed, a card from Mr. Brannen will be of interest to the readers of this paper.

In this note, which is personal to the editor and was not intended for publication, Mr. Brannen says: "Last spring, when it was too late, some of our Statesboro friends spoke of planting tobacco. I planted, as an experiment, four acres this year and have been agreeably surprised at the quantity and quality of tobacco our lands will produce. I have just finished curing my fifth barn. I will have closed to 4,000 pounds.

"Last spring, once a county-wide drive for a good tobacco crop for 1924. See relative to a warehouse in Statesboro. To operate a warehouse we ought to have 3,000 acres in Bulloch county and then bid for business in nearby counties. We can get this if we will pull right and pull hard.

We will need a little regular supervision from January till June; then we will need, for success, two dozen men who know the game for one month. We can get these men from North Carolina, South Carolina, and from parts of Georgia.

"I am not easily discouraged; I believe all things come to him who works and waits. I believe our farmers can do well in this line, and I think our business men will help us on the drive."

Mr. Brannen's experience and his observations ought to be of help to our farmers who are willing to turn to something that offers a solution to their problem. Our adjoining counties have already come to recognize tobacco as the important money crop. Pierce county, less than seventy-five miles from here is reaping in wealth from tobacco; Apple county, which one passes through in going to Waycross, is fully astir with tobacco farmers. From the roadside one sees the greatest activity in the tobacco fields. Those people have found it profitable as a partial substitute for boll weevil production.

Bulloch County Singing Convention will be held in the court house at Statesboro Sunday, July 27th. Everybody is invited to come and bring with you well filled baskets.
